Stay Healthy and Fit in 2016

There are many ways to stay healthy and fit this New Year. You can bike, ski or hike, but whatever you do – get outside! Winter sports can help build muscle, increase strength and improve balance. These activities can be shared by everyone from young to old. They also burn more calories in the colder winter weather.

Working out is great for your physical body, but it is good for your mind too! Exercising releases hormones that will boost your mood and make you feel good. Try these winter activities to get your heart and blood pumping:

1) Snowshoeing: Using snowshoes, you can trek through snow covered hiking trails for miles on top of the powder. This is a low-impact activity. It burns fat and supports heart health.

2) Cross-Country Skiing: This activity is great for building strength. You slide across the snow non-stop for long periods of time. This ongoing cardio helps to grow your lung capacity and uses many different muscle groups. This winter activity will keep your heart rate up and blood flowing!

3) Ice Skating: Ice skating can be a fun and challenging activity. Ice-skating uses a lot of small stabilizer muscles in your hips, knees and ankles. It also includes larger muscles in your legs, buttocks and core. Although you may need to locate a local rink, this activity is perfect for winter weather!

4) Hiking: During these colder months, hiking can be a great adventure! There will be less people on the trails so you can find some hidden winter gems. You will burn extra calories in the cold and boost your immune system. Leave your stuffy home or office for the great outdoors!

5) Biking: This low impact activity is perfect any time of year. Riding your bike increases endurance and your aerobic health. You can ride on trails or around town. Biking is a great way to stay in shape all year round!

Important! When being active (especially during wintertime), drink water and wear the right clothing. Your body will sweat more and you will need to drink even more water than normal. Wear multiple layers of clothing and remove items as you warm up. Stay healthy and fit – but don't forget to be prepared!

It is important that you do not let these colder months keep you inside. Year-round exercise will allow you to avoid weight gain and depression. Get outside today! Your body (and mind) will thank you!

*Consult your doctor before starting any new exercise routine.

Family Planning

What is Family Planning?

Family planning is how individuals and couples prepare for the birth of their child. This includes birth control activities to prevent pregnancy as well as being healthy and prepared before becoming pregnant.

Why is family planning important?

With the right planning and education, a woman's health and happiness can increase at all stages of pregnancy. A couple can then plan for family size and age spacing between children. The family can also prepare for work leaves and other financial needs when pregnant. Keeping work, school and other goals on track is a great benefit to proper planning.

Thinking ahead will give the child the best chance to be born healthy and happy.

IMPORTANT: Hysterectomies are not covered as a part of family planning.
